OGLETHORPE UNIVERSITY
FOUNDED 1835

Tonight I sit in my new home (on one of the two chairs that I have moved in thus far), preparing to share my thoughts with you about my days as Oglethorpe's president. I believe I could write a short book about my start, although I have a feeling based on the length of my workday that this article may have to suffice.

I love my job and could not be more proud to serve this university and all of those whose lives have been touched by it.

Saturday night, after finishing my dinner at the local Waffle House with my parents and younger son, I was stopped by a man at the counter who asked me what connection I had to OU (I was wearing a decidedly unpresidential Oglethorpe golf hat, pair of shorts and T-shirt). When I confessed that I was the new president, he stated emphatically, "No, you are not. You don't look like any president of a college." He insisted on seeing my business card, which I did not have with me, then proceeded to quiz me on my resume, which he had apparently read carefully in the paper. I must have answered most of these questions convincingly, at least to the point where he felt comfortable enough to share, right there at the counter, a few personal complaints about Oglethorpe. I left that conversation bemused and impressed at the ownership and connection the community obviously feels with the university. And of course, it gives me the perfect excuse to make frequent trips back to the Waffle House.

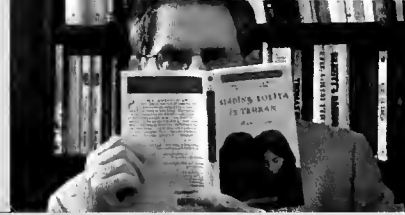

Each night for the past month or so, I have set aside some time to read. This week I read a wonderfully moving translation of a story about a Japanese man living out the last years of his life amidst the after-effects of the Hiroshima bombing. I also read a book on Kant, my first venture into Kantian philosophy in over 30 years. Two nights ago, I delved into the implications of Alexis de Tocqueville's political theories on religion in a civic society. Last week, I learned about the light-sensing capabilities of mollusks. I have studied the principles of teacher education in the tradition of the liberal arts, witch hunting in Bamberg, Germany, during the Catholic Reformation, chivalry in Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, urban bird conservation, and women in mathematics. I have gone back to school, and I have the faculty at Oglethorpe to thank. I asked each member of the faculty to share with me something he or she had written, as one small attempt to come to know each person responsible for engaging and exciting the students who come to Oglethorpe. Some, I must admit, are difficult for me to grasp (after all, I am only a first-year student). But each is passionately felt and gives me a great sense of pride in the depth and breadth of our faculty.

Oglethorpe provides an exceptional education: an education that elevates the lives of our students and, in turn, infuses the lives of those around them with meaning and purpose. An Oglethorpe education is all about enrichment, meaning and outcomes. Yet we also face immense challenges, and I have encountered all of those challenges during my first days here. My job is to articulate Oglethorpe's mission to inspire each constituent to support the university in realizing our vision and to provide the leadership to be a prudent and wise steward of our resources. Yet it will take all of us working together to ensure that Oglethorpe will thrive over the next decades. And yes, I will be calling you!

I am honored to be here, inspired by the trust that has been placed in me and thrilled to have this opportunity to lead Oglethorpe University. Together, we will accomplish great things.

Reading with Fresh Eyes

Christopher Ames

“That first day [of class] I asked my students what they thought fiction should accomplish, why one should bother to read fiction at all.” It’s a good question, and it might well be the start of a lively freshman discussion in Oglethorpe’s Core 101, Narratives of the Self. But the teacher quoted above is Azar Nafisi, who asked this question of her students at the University of Tehran in September 1979, shortly after the Islamist fundamentalist revolution that installed the Ayatollah Khomeini as ruler of Iran.

Nafisi remained in Iran for 17 more years, teaching literature in an increasingly hostile and oppressive environment, continuing to meet with a small group of women students in her apartment after censorship and the closing of the university made literature classes virtually impossible. She tells her remarkable story in the bestselling memoir Reading Lolita in Tehran, which was this year’s freshmen summer reading assignment.

Students about to begin their college experience make a particularly appropriate audience for Nafisi’s book since they take for granted the access to information, knowledge, inquiry and debate that the people of Iran saw disappear before their eyes in the name of revolution. Nafisi’s students read and discuss classic works of the Anglo-American tradition: The Great Gatsby, Pride and Prejudice, Daisy Miller and, yes, Nabokov’s Lolita.

We are tempted to think that in a world in which dissidents are being jailed and executed, in which female students are dismissed from college for refusing to wear the veil or for wearing nail polish or mascara, that such traditional classics would seem alien and irrelevant. Part of the fascinating story that Nafisi tells is how these students discovered meaning and relevance in reading great literature from another time, place and language.

Her experience shows us familiar books in a new light. What is it like to read The Great Gatsby in a society that punishes adultery with death by stoning? What is it like to read Lolita in a society which accepts arranged marriages for 12 year olds? What is it like to read Homer’s Odyssey in a world with transcontinental air travel and global positioning satellites? What is it like to read Shakespeare’s Othello in society where we are often told that racial difference is becoming a thing of the past? These questions have obvious parallels for our freshmen sitting in Narratives of the Self.

But as well as showing familiar texts from a different angle, Reading Lolita in Tehran reminds us that the pleasures and values of reading fiction cross national and temporal boundaries. As Nafisi continues explaining to her class on the first day, “Most great works of the imagination were meant to make you feel like a stranger in your own home. The best fiction always forced us to question what we took for granted.” For this reason, totalitarian societies fear literary works and a free press; and for the same reason, higher education in a democratic society immerses students in such texts. Reading Lolita reminds us as well how precarious the freedoms we take for granted can be.

Literature helps us find meaning in the world by firing our imaginations and broadening the sphere of our experiences. In Narratives of the Self, students explore how people, over time, have used storytelling to understand what it means to be alive. In reading the narratives of others, we compose our own narrative of self – just as we see Nafisi’s core group of students do in Reading Lolita.

Popular discourse today stresses reading for identification – to identify with a character who is somehow like us. That is one value of fiction, one answer to Nafisi’s question at the start of the term. But literature also is valuable because it gives voice to things we have not and could not have experienced; it is important for its strangeness as well as its familiarity. Ultimately, all of a liberal arts education forces us to move beyond the boundaries of our immediate world, to learn the history and culture of other societies and other eras, to see the worlds revealed through the analyses of science and social science – learn other languages (figuratively and literally). For these reasons, Azar Nafisi’s courageous tale offers a good starting point for the class of 2009.

Hurricane Relief

Many Oglethorpe students spent their Labor Day weekend at the airport – not waiting for a flight to an exotic location but volunteering with Angel Flight of Georgia to get much needed food and supplies to the victims of Hurricane Katrina.

Led by President Larry Schall and his wife Betty Londergan, students bought supplies and loaded them onto planes at DeKalb Peachtree Airport throughout the weekend. Oglethorpe students, faculty and staff purchased over $50,000 in food, medicine and bedding during the three-day weekend on behalf of Angel Flight. Through Angel Flight, pilots volunteered their planes to ship supplies to southern Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana.

President Schall, Londergan, Alex Watterson '07 and Kim Wiley '07 had the opportunity to fly down to Baton Rouge to help unload and distribute supplies over the Labor Day Weekend. The following week, Schall and Stormy Petrel editor Rachael Maddux '07 visited a shelter in Mansfield, Louisiana, to help distribute supplies while his wife flew to Baton Rouge with Luis Dominguez '06 to pick up Roberto Gimenez, a displaced student from the University of New Orleans who is now attending Oglethorpe.

Students Help with Wildlife Conservation

Three Oglethorpe University students volunteered to write a brochure to educate fisherman on how to save the kori bustard species, Africa's heaviest flying bird.

Ben Corey '06, Deidre Hubbard '06 and Kelly Sands '05 created the brochure after a Conservation Biology class field trip to the Wildlife Conservation Society's Wildlife Propagation Facility on Georgia's St. Catherine Island.

The island is currently being used by the kori bustard Species Survivorship Plan operated out of the National Zoo in Washington, D.C. The bustard population is declining due to human activities such as the use of pesticides, conversion of their habitat to farmland, collisions with overhead power lines and hunting the birds for food or for feathers. The educational brochure maps out these dangers and solutions with easy-to-understand text and amazing photography.

"This is a great example of our students going far beyond their coursework, applying what they learned (in class) and providing a service to society," said Oglethorpe University biology professor Roarke Donnelly. The Conversation Biology course is an elective in the Urban Ecology certificate program.

Oglethorpe in Princeton Review

Oglethorpe University is featured in The Princeton Review's Best 361 Colleges 2006 edition which came out in late August. A mixture of student quotes and Review opinions feature Oglethorpe in a very positive manner. Academically Oglethorpe is described as "an intimate education."

A student was quoted to say, "Classes at Oglethorpe challenge us to think and introduce us to new concepts. Thanks to our core program, these concepts often build upon one another, so that I feel like my education is really coming together."

The student body is described as "intelligent and want[ing] to learn. Their objective is often not 'career prep' but more of becoming a learned person." The Inside Word written by The Princeton Review states, "It won't be long before the academic strength found at Oglethorpe attracts wider attention and more applicants... Go to Atlanta for a campus interview – you'll leave impressed."

The Princeton Review also ranked Oglethorpe #18 on the Class Discussions Encouraged List, one of the 140 Best Southeastern Colleges and one of America's Best Value Colleges.

Have a Seat

When students returned to campus this fall, they not only had a new president and new residence halls (see brief, next page). They also had a new way to enjoy the campus environment.

Trustee Susan Soper '69 and her husband Bo Holland donated 26 Adirondack chairs for use on the Academic Quadrangle in honor of Susan's niece Molly McSweeney. The idea for chairs on the quad came from a visit to Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pennsylvania. Oglethorpe's chairs are made by the same Amish group who produced the chairs at Dickinson and arrived just in time for the start of the semester, quickly becoming a popular gathering place for students between classes.

Students Fill North and South

This year, upperclassmen were just as excited as freshmen to move in, thanks to the opening of two new residence halls. The North and South Halls were built on the site of Dempsey and Trustee Halls in the Upper Quad. The $10 million, 164-bed facilities feature apartment-style living and Oglethorpe's unique Collegiate Gothic architecture.

President Larry Schall noted the construction was completed on time and under budget. "It doesn't get much better than that," he said.

There are four students to a suite, which includes four private bedrooms, two bathrooms, a kitchen space and common living area. The four-floor granite buildings feature Oglethorpe's unique Collegiate Gothic architecture. With the opening of these two new residence halls, Oglethorpe has just over 500 beds on campus.

This is CNN, powered by Oglethorpe

Anna Rhett Cobb '04, a Communications & Rhetoric Studies major, landed a spot in CNN's highly esteemed video journalist (VJ) program seven months after graduation. In a matter of months, she was training new VJs. Then on April 1, she was told she was going to Rome to assist with the coverage of Pope John Paul II. She flew out the next day, minutes after his death was announced, and stayed in Rome for a week, leaving just before the funeral.

"I had the chance to work with all the big anchors like Anderson Cooper, Christiane Amanpour and Aaron Brown as well as a bunch of producers from Washington, D.C., London and New York," Anna Rhett said. "I got to see how a whole TV station transports itself overseas and works out in the field."

"I walked about 40 minutes to and from the Vatican every morning," she said. "That gave me a chance to see some of the city. I did not really get to shop or eat out or sightsee because I worked 13-hour days. Even so, it was one of the greatest experiences I have ever had. I got to witness history, and it was amazing."

Upon her arrival, Anna Rhett was quickly promoted to her current position as a Feeds Coordinator for CNN in Atlanta.

Freshmen Orientation

This year's freshmen class is the largest in Oglethorpe's history. 233 students enrolled in the class of 2009, bringing full-time enrollment up to 900 students. During their orientation weekend, freshmen met in their Fresh Focus groups to discuss life at Oglethorpe and their summer reading assignment, Reading Lolita in Tehran, a choice Provost Christopher Ames explains in his column on page 3.

Freshmen who moved onto campus August 27 were greeted by student volunteers, eager to help the newest Petrels move into their residence halls. Freshmen and parents alike were thrilled by the assistance offered by Oglethorpe's upperclassmen.

Permanent Collection on Display

The Oglethorpe University Museum of Art is showing Focus on Realism: The Permanent Collection through December 18. The collection represents the diverse and international exhibitions the museum has held over two decades. Among the works in the collection are dramatic photographs of Georgia O'Keeffe by Todd Webb, 18th century engravings illustrating Shakespeare's plays, etchings by Camille Corot and August Rodin and realist paintings by Americans Richard Maury and Jeffrey Mims and Spaniard Francisco Roa. They are all protected by a classic 14th century Japanese Kamakura Buddha. Also in the collection are new gifts to the museum as well as important acquisitions including works by watercolorists Francis Augustus Silva and Sondra Freckelton. Two of the latest acquisitions are stunning works by Atlantans who have each been previously featured at the museum: a finely carved wooden torso by Chad Awalt and a sun-bathed interior oil by Gail Wegodsky, pictured below.

The museum is open Tuesday through Sunday from noon until 5:00 p.m. Admission is $5 per person, free to members and Oglethorpe faculty, staff, students and alumni. Ample free parking is located behind the Philip Weltner Library, and the museum is located on the library's third floor. For more information call 404-364-8555 or visit www.oglethorpe.edu (keyword: museum).

90 Years of Basketball

By Liz Campbell '01

On Saturday, November 19, the Stormy Petrels will christen the newly renovated Dorough Field House while celebrating 90 years of Oglethorpe basketball. The Petrels first suited up to take on the Decatur Athletic Club on December 15, 1916, but it was Garland Pinholster who brought attention to Oglethorpe basketball.

Shelly Anderson '97

Pinholster led the Petrels in Georgia's first integrated basketball game in 1961, when Oglethorpe upset Rhode Island 64-47. That Petrel squad won the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) regionals. Two years later, Oglethorpe won the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) regional championship and progressed to the National Final Four where they claimed a third place finish.

In Pinholster's final season the Petrels finished second in the NCAA regionals. During his tenure, Oglethorpe won four Georgia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference (GIAC) championships and recorded 180 wins and 68 losses.

Bill Carter took over from his former coach and led the Petrels to a 62-19 record from 1967 until 1970. His 1968 team finished third in the NCAA regionals; the 1969 team took eighth in the NCAA nationals.

In 1976 Jack Berkshire took over a struggling program. His 1980 team posted 23 wins, won the conference tournament and earned a number one ranking in NAIA district 25. The Petrels made the NAIA playoffs seven times in the 1980s before dropping NAIA for NCAA. During their first season as a Division III team, the Petrels went 17-8 and were ranked ninth nationally. Berkshire recorded his 181st win in 1990, surpassing Pinholster for most wins as an Oglethorpe coach.

In 1991 Oglethorpe joined the Southern Collegiate Athletic Conference (SCAC) and Berkshire's men were in the conference championships. In 1993 the Petrels rattled off 13 wins in a row to finish the season 20-6 earning the SCAC championship.

Brian Davis '94, the SCAC player of the year that season, is still haunted by the first-round NCAA tournament game. "I think I still have bruises from that game but it was a great atmosphere [in Dorough], a great experience." The following season the men went 18-7 to finish second in the SCAC and earn their second consecutive NCAA tournament bid.

With 315 career wins, Berkshire retired in 1998. "Coach Berkshire is such an important part of Oglethorpe history," said current men's coach Philip Ponder '99. "He was a great offensive mind. I still run Coach Berkshire's old number one play."

In 2003 Ponder inherited the men's program after six years as an assistant. His young team finished sixth in the SCAC.

90 Years of Basketball

The following year the team placed fifth in the SCAC. Russ Churchwell '05 became the SCAC all time male leading scorer and rebounder and Oglethorpe's sixth All-American male, following Bobby Nance '63, Mike Dahl '69, Chris Wall '99, Doug Alexander '68 and Brian Davis '94.

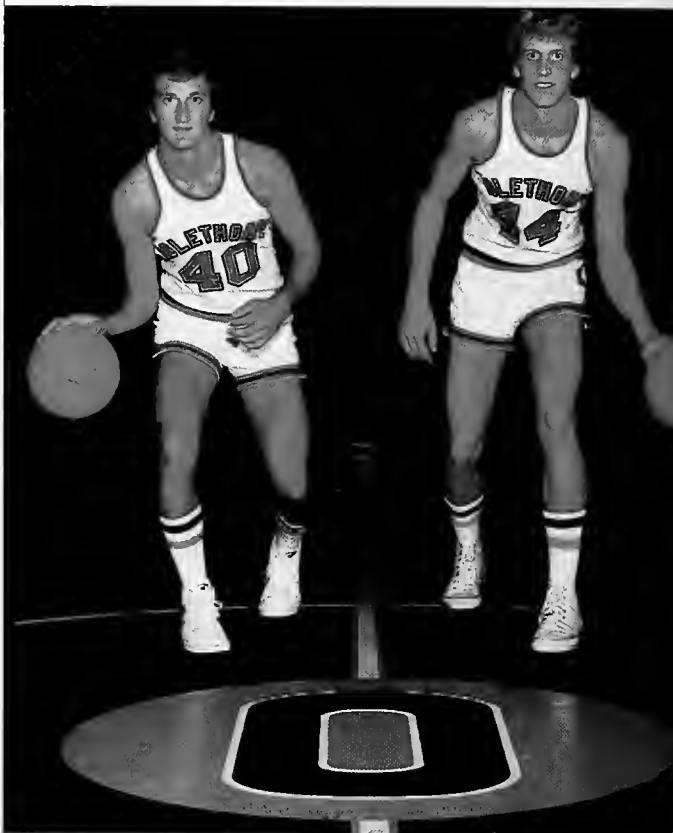

Oglethorpe added women's basketball when it joined the SCAC in 1991. Brenda Hillman was the team's first coach, leading the women to a fifth-place SCAC finish in their second year.

Beth Elbon took the helm of the women's program in 1995. In 1998 the young Petrels upset Trinity. Amy Myers Flinn '00, a sophomore at the time, recalls "watching the clock tick down and not believing that we were actually going to win." The following year Angie Milford took over the women's program. Coach Milford's team posted the best record in their nine year history in her first season.

In 2000, Kathy Corbett took over the women's program, leading the Lady Petrels to their first victory over cross-town rival Emory. In 2002 the women earned a spot in the inaugural SCAC tournament. During Corbett's tenure the women's program grew and Heather Francoeur '03 rewrote the SCAC and OU record books. A two-time Josten's trophy finalist and Oglethorpe's first female All-American, Francoeur was the school's first basketball player to have her jersey retired.

Ron Sattelle came from St. Pius High School to lead the women's program in 2004. Sattelle embraced the challenge of developing a winning women's program saying, "The student-athletes here are terrific people who like to achieve. I think they can achieve great things on the basketball court." Sattelle and his staff are committed to instilling a winning attitude and changing the face of women's basketball at Oglethorpe.

The home of the Petrels has already undergone remarkable changes. Behind the leadership of Trustee Warren Jobe and his wife Sally with the support of Dr. Garland Pinholster, funds were raised to improve Dorrough Field House.

Chris Sertich '81 and Richard Johnson '81

At the conclusion of the 2004 season, the old yellow tartan floor was buried under a beautiful new maple floor. The lanes are still black and the end lines still read "Oglethorpe" and "Stormy Petrels." A large black, gold-trimmed "OU" is in the center circle. When the new floor was revealed to alumni and donors, it also gained a name – Pinholster Court, honoring the legendary coach. The rest of the field house also received a facelift, with new lighting, carpet and walls installed. Phase two of the renovation will bring a new Hall of Fame and café area.

Come see the new Dorrough this season. Special events are being planned for Homecoming Weekend, February 10-12, 2006. Check out www.oglethorpe.edu for details and this year's basketball schedule.

World Under a Microscope

By Mark DeLong '03

Oglethorpe's curriculum has historically focused on the liberal arts and sciences. Chemistry, physics and biology majors learn scientific techniques and theory while getting a broad liberal arts background.

"There are many schools where a science major is all science courses," said Dr. Daniel Schadler, Professor of Biology at Oglethorpe since 1975. "They have a lot of technical training, but technology changes. The Oglethorpe liberal arts background comes in handy and prepares students for lifetime learning."

Through the years, Schadler, one of seven Oglethorpe science professors, has helped many students get placement in some of the top post-graduate and medical programs in the country, including Emory, Yale and Princeton. A few receive national recognition for their work, while most work behind the scenes to make their difference.

Emily Gurley '96

TRACKING INFECTIOUS DISEASES

Emily Gurley '96 knew she wanted to live abroad after graduating with a bachelor's in history. She grew up traveling the globe, living in Bangladesh, Honduras, the former Yugoslavia and Switzerland. Now the only history Emily thinks of regularly is case history, tracking infectious diseases at the Center for Health and Population Research in Dhaka, Bangladesh.

After graduation, Emily entered the Peace Corps in Romania, working with non-governmental organizations to develop their programs. She discovered an interest in health programs, including HIV education and the establishment of a palliative care training center at Romania's first hospice. While in Romania, Emily met her husband and they both returned to the states so she could further her education.

Emily returned to Atlanta to earn her master's in public health from Emory University. Her transition to public health was "a natural fit." Emily's dad was a physician and by spending time in developing countries, she learned the "incredible impact" that health can have on people's daily lives.

Emily is currently involved in a number of infectious disease research projects, including encephalitis surveillance – monitoring patient's symptoms at four hospitals, taking case histories and sending biological samples to the CDC in Atlanta and Fort Collins, Colorado, to test for over 100 pathogens in hopes of discovering the cause of encephalitis. Through this project, Emily has had the opportunity to investigate three outbreaks of the Nipah virus, which is a newly emerging virus first identified as the pathogen responsible for deadly encephalitis outbreaks in Malaysia and Singapore in the late 1990s.

"It's really exciting work," she says of her Nipah research. During one outbreak, Emily noticed, "all the people who were sick had been exposed to a man who had died of it a few weeks before." That outbreak investigation provided the strongest evidence to date that Nipah virus can be transmitted from person-to-person.

Emily and the Nipah team will continue their year-long surveillance as part of the Nipah outbreak project, which began this fall and is funded by the National Institutes of Health.

Emily has spent two years tracking infectious diseases in Bangladesh and plans to spend two more. After that, she hopes to return to the U.S. to earn her doctorate in epidemiology.

ANALYZING TERRORISM PREPAREDNESS

Geoff Crider '04 never thought he would be working in terrorism preparedness, few even thought of the term when Geoff came to Oglethorpe in the fall of 2000. A communications major, Geoff hoped to become a public relations consultant. In his senior year, he began an internship at BearingPoint, a business consulting firm, working on a project for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. After graduation, they offered him a full-time job.

"The transition was difficult at first because it required me to learn a lot about public health and all the behind-the-scenes preparedness efforts that have been going on since September 11 in a relatively short amount of time," Geoff said. He recognizes that his courses in rhetoric, business and persuasive writing and the core curriculum built a strong foundation for his future.

"My Oglethorpe education definitely prepared me for this job. I feel that if I had gone to any other school, I wouldn't have been able to jump into a field and career completely outside of what I studied."

The CDC's Coordinating Office of Terrorism Preparedness and Emergency Response, where Geoff works, receives over $1 billion in funding for 115 projects around the country including the Strategic National Stockpile. Geoff and five other BearingPoint consultants help the CDC analyze and evaluate each project quarterly.

"There's a lot of jargon I get caught up in," he says. "I've become really familiar with words like Bacillus anthracis (Anthrax) and Yersinia pestis (Plague), especially on lab and research projects.

"We are helping make important decisions on matters that would have an effect on the entire country if another terrorist attack were to occur. My big realization is that we are making a difference, albeit one that's not visible to the public."

DENTIST WITH WORLDLY MISSION

Ken Hutchinson '78 has been running his own dental practice in Gwinnett County for over two decades.

While watching the "sleepy little town" of Snellville turn into a booming Atlanta suburb, he has gained professional recognition, being named a Fellow of the Academy of General Dentistry and the International College of Dentists.

Three years ago Ken began what he considers his most rewarding work, joining an annual mission trip to South America.

Ken Hutchinson '78

"It's a very humbling experience to see people in abject poverty who have none of the creature comforts we take for granted," he said. "And yet, they're tremendously happy people. It helps you look at priorities in your own life."

The trips are organized by a church in Augusta, Ga., and include a handful of dentists and many students from the Medical College of Georgia, where Ken completed his dental training in 1982. This summer, the group traveled to Peru after taking two previous trips to Ecuador.

"This is often the first clinical experience for these students," Ken said. "They have a lot of trepidation in the beginning, but it can bolster their confidence when they get back to school."

Ken, whose father and grandfather were both physicians, chose dentistry as his career path while still in high school. "I knew I wanted to do something in the medical field, but I also wanted to work with my hands," he said.

He came to Oglethorpe to study biology while playing in a rock cover band that played "frat parties and sock hops. Oglethorpe was a tremendous undergraduate experience that prepared me well for dental school," Ken said.

When Ken works with students searching for a college, he frequently encourages them to check out Oglethorpe. Maybe he can persuade his South American patients to make the journey to Atlanta. Ken hopes to continue his mission trips – "God willing."

RESEARCHER WORKS FOR BETTER DRUGS

After her junior year, biology major Heide Oller '03 was guided into a research internship at Emory University by Dr. Schadler. That internship gave her real-world experience while allowing her to build upon her coursework

"Internships are a great thing," Heide said. "I would encourage everyone to take one to gain lab experience."

World Under a Microscope

Heide's internship led to a full-time job after graduation. After two years, she was promoted to lead research specialist in her lab at Emory's department of pharmacology. Looking back at her time at Oglethorpe, Heide credits Dr. Philip Zinsmeister, retired professor of biology, for helping her tackle major concepts and ideas.

"Dr. Zinsmeister was challenging," she said. "He helped you grasp the ideas to understand how things work. It also helped that his courses matched my interests."

Growing up, Heide was exposed to the research field early. Her mother worked with the German Red Cross, where a team was in the early stages of stem cell research.

Now Heide works on G-protein coupled receptors, trying to understand how different drugs or compounds interact with them. Her research can lead to more effective drugs that will combat everything from the common cold to narcolepsy.

After completing her internship, Heide studied abroad at Otaru University in Japan. She still returns to Oglethorpe to visit with current Japanese exchange students.

"Everyone over there was so nice to me," she said. "They helped me see the city and take in the culture. I just hope to give a little back when they come to visit here."

ADDITIONAL SCIENTIFIC ACHEIVEMENTS

Monique Anderson '01 received second place in the Health and Human Services Secretary's Award for Innovations in Health Promotion and Disease Prevention for her project Healthy Bodies, Healthy Souls: A Faith-Based Community-Academic Partnership, completed with fellow Harvard Medical School student Rachel Peragallo.

Vanessa Bundy '01, a student at the Medical College of Georgia, was one of 60 American doctoral students who this summer learned from Nobel Laureates in chemistry, physics and medicine.

This fall, three 2005 graduates, all basketball players, are enrolled in medical school. Julie Colantoni, Russ

Heide Oller '03

Churchwell and Katie Michalyzk follow many alumni who have left the Petrel nest for a medical or public health career.

Dr. Brooke Bourdelat-Parks '95 is a visiting assistant professor of biology at Oglethorpe this year, after participating in the Fellowships in Research and Science Teaching (FIRST) program at Emory. Through FIRST Brooke taught a bioethics course to pre-freshmen at Morehouse College for two summers after earning her Ph.D. in biology from Georgia Institute of Technology.

Oglethorpe's science alumni are employed at the National Institutes of Health, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Food and Drug Administration, St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, Eli Lilly and in their own private practices.

DONOR MAKES A DIFFERENCE

This past May, Trustee Robert E. Bowden '66 attended a campus event where selected students, including two science majors, discussed their specific discipline and what Oglethorpe means to them. That very day Bowden, who was not a science major, donated $25,000 earmarked to update lab equipment and possibly provide a science scholarship. This is just one example of how the Oglethorpe community can make a difference in the lives of current and future students.

Remembering Steve Schmidt, 1917-2005

By Dr. Garland Pinholster

“Mr. Oglethorpe” died this past spring, one day after Oglethorpe graduated the class of 2005. Steven J. Schmidt ’40 embodied the Oglethorpe experience.

His legacy will not be in words, nor will it be in the bricks and mortar of buildings with his name on them. Rather his legacy will be in the hearts and minds of every single person who had the opportunity to know him.

Steve was orphaned at age 10. He never complained but always bragged on his foster parents. Steve had what I call the “get up” spirit. Some people come to defeat early in life and stay there always. Appalachian siblings born into poverty from the same gene pool will turn out differently. One will get up and one will not. It has always intrigued me why that happens.

Steve got up and stayed up after his early knock down. He arrived at Oglethorpe at 18 with a football scholarship and most of his worldly goods on his back. Steve played football as a 140-pound quarterback in OU’s razzle dazzle double wing. It involved a lot of reverses and double reverses in the backfield ball handling.

He was known as “Mr. Stormy Petrel” or “Mr. Oglethorpe” due to his love of the college. Steve met his wife Jeanne at Oglethorpe. The couple was happily married for over 60 years. While flying missions in WWII, Steve nicknamed his B-29 bomber the Stormy Petrel.

After his WWII service, Steve began coaching high school football and basketball. He coached at Baxley and then at North Fulton High. When I met Steve, I was trying to coach basketball at the college without a budget, a gym or a ball. Steve encouraged me and set about providing all of the ingredients needed. We began what for me was the most fulfilling years of my life.

Steve’s love of the college was so great and his enthusiasm was so contagious that it carried over to everyone at OU – board members, faculty, students and alumni all caught his spirit. I have always thought that Steve was directly responsible for the building of a gym, directly responsible for the athletic scholarships we had and directly responsible for all the athletic success we enjoyed between 1956 and 1966. In the following 10 years, we instilled pride in the athletic program while the college grew from 200 students to 1,000 students. He helped later coaches and players just as much as he did us.

His love of Oglethorpe spread to his employees at Dixie Seal & Stamp. Virtually all of his employees worked on college projects at one time or another. At times I would walk into their offices and yell out, “All you people working on Dixie Seal stuff, stop and start on OU work.” Some would laugh and hold up OU material that was on their desk.

Steve’s long and successful career at Dixie Seal and Stamp was built on what I call the lagniappe theory of business. That is, the bakers dozen. In South Louisiana, the Cajuns will nearly always give you something extra with your purchase – a lagniappe. It was always impossible to leave Dixie Seal & Stamp without two things happening: you would leave with a gift – it might be something small such as a 12-inch ruler made of brass called a “golden ruler,” but you would leave with something, and you would hear the latest news about the children in his life – Leslie, Palmer and Stevie - and later about the grandchildren – Cameron, Fran, Curtis and Marty.

Remembering Steve Schmidt, 1917-2005

When I was able to get a bill passed creating a specialized auto tag for Georgia's highway wildflower fund, the entire Dixie Seal & Stamp art department was dedicated to the design work. When you see a state wildflower tag on the highway, remember that it really started with Dixie Seal & Stamp.

In addition to his professional work, Steve was an active member of his community. He was a member of Oglethorpe's Board of Trustees for 43 years, serving as chairman for 14 years.

Steve also presided over the Atlanta Rotary Club, The Atlanta Tip-Off Club, the Braves Booster Club, the Administrative Board of the First Methodist Church of Decatur, the Georgia Chapter of the Multiple Sclerosis Association, the children's PTAs and anything else in the city that was good for its citizens. With all that he never lost interest in our athletic program, so today we have the Steve Schmidt Recreation Center and the Schmidt Residence Hall at Oglethorpe.

One year, at the annual Tip-Off Club Naismith Awards banquet I presented Steve a plaque that I had agonized over for some time. I finally settled on just three lines that I thought summed up Steve Schmidt's life philosophy fairly well. Here are the three lines:

The best source of power is attitude.
The best source of achievement is self discipline.
The best source of virtue is loyalty.

After I presented the plaque to Steve, Coach Norm Sloan of North Carolina State copied the verbiage for use in his locker room. I think Steve was pleased with it, and I still believe those lines sum up Steve's life philosophy.

Alumni Alert

Dr. Larry Schall has been named the 16th president of Oglethorpe, after a long and thorough search led by Bell Turner Lynch '61 and a committee with many alumni. Those of us who have spent time with Dr. Schall will unequivocally tell you that Oglethorpe is extremely fortunate to have him lead us into our next phase of greatness. Please make it a priority to attend one of the many welcome events planned to introduce Dr. Schall and his wife, Betty Londergan, to the Oglethorpe community this academic year.

If you haven't been to campus lately, there is much to see besides the new president. Two new residence halls, completed just under the $10 million budget, opened in time for students to move in this August. The Dorrough Field House has literally been transformed, the centerpiece being a beautiful new maple hardwood floor appropriately named Pinholster Court, in honor of legendary coach Dr. Garland Pinholster. The Schmidt Recreational Center has also been transformed, thanks to a partnership with Infinite Sports Performance. Our tennis courts will soon receive an overhaul as well, with more details to come later this year.

Let me encourage you to help us make sure that your alumni association continues to play a vital role in the life of the university. Please show your support by attending upcoming university events, including Alumni Weekend 2006 (March 31-April 2). Keep an eye out for reminders about other alumni activities. Please also support the university by contributing to this year's Oglethorpe Fund. Whether you received 100% scholarship or paid every dime for your education, your continued financial support of Oglethorpe is needed to ensure that future generations can have the same great Oglethorpe experience as you did.

Finally, we are always looking for alumni who would like a more active role in the alumni association. To learn more, contact me (jshelton@laborlawyers.com) or Barb Henry in the Alumni Office (bhenry@oglethorpe.edu or 404-364-8443). As the new president of your alumni association, I look forward to a great year and hope you will be a part of it.

Celebrating Alumni

Last May brought two new alumni traditions to campus – the Carillon Ceremony for graduating seniors and a Medallion Ceremony during Commencement for Golden Petrels.

The class of 2005 was the first to participate in the Carillon Ceremony. Over 60 seniors climbed the bell tower, signed the historic Carillon Registry and rang one of the 42 carillon bells in celebration of their accomplishments at the university. The ceremony received press coverage in the next day's Atlanta Journal-Constitution. The class of 2006 eagerly awaits their turn to ring the bells atop Lupton Hall.

Courtney Terrell '05

Graduates from 1955 and earlier were honored in a special way at the 2005 Commencement Ceremony on May 7. The 15 Golden Petrels in attendance, including Walter "Bill" Turrentine '55 (left, honored by Joy Simmons '05), were presented with medallions in recognition of their lifetime accomplishments and their contributions to the Oglethorpe community. The Golden Petrels also enjoyed a luncheon in their honor after the ceremony.

The Spirit of Volunteerism

Volunteers serve in a variety of capacities on campus, from the Board of Trustees to alumni phonathons, Parent's Weekend volunteers, and host committee volunteers for our many out-of-town events. The names in this section are testimony to the dedication, hard work and commitment to excellence that the university maintains. We recognize all the people who gave generously of their time and talents to help Oglethorpe. It is because of these volunteers that the university is able to provide its outstanding educational experience. We have tried to include everyone in our lists, and we sincerely regret any inadvertent omissions.

Documenting "Old Oglethorpe"

By Joanne Yendle

The source is a worn, leather-bound volume with the words Minutes of the Board of Trustees on its spine. The first pages record the proceedings of a "board of trustees for the contemplated college" appointed by the Hopewell Presbytery and convened on October 21, 1835 at Milledgeville, Georgia. An entry for Friday, October 23, is of particular interest:

"On motion of Col. A. L. Alexander – Resolved that the Institution at Midway shall be called by the name of Oglethorpe University."

This simple statement in carefully measured script documents the beginnings of the university 170 years ago.

Successive entries in the minutes over the next 35 years record the board's decisions regarding governance, curriculum and rules of conduct for students. They chart the progress of the institution to June 1870, by which time it was resolved to move the university from Midway to Atlanta. A second set of minutes begun in March 1870 overlaps the first and reflects the actions of the board as it began to chart the course of the university in its new location.

These two volumes anchor a small but significant archives collection related to "Old Oglethorpe." Other items include catalogues, copies of addresses and orations, correspondence and ephemera. A few are described here.

Catalogues which span the years 1852 to 1860 include the names of board members, officers, faculty, students and alumni as well as the admissions requirements, a description of the course of study, the college laws and the academic calendar. Some include a list of expenses, which in 1853 totaled $50 for tuition, room rent and repairs for three semesters; $12.50 per month for board; and $12 per annum for fuel and lights.

A worn and extensively annotated 1849 edition of Graeca Majora bears the names of two Oglethorpe students, members of the classes of 1853 and 1854. Study of the classics, though more intense for freshmen and sophomores was a requirement for all four years.

Orations by students, mandated by the Rules of the University, were an integral part of the curriculum. With the founding of two rival debating clubs, Thalia and Phi Delta, in 1839, "declaiming" took on an even larger role in college life. Addresses were a central feature of the annual Fourth of July and Commencement celebrations that drew large audiences from nearby Milledgeville and the surrounding countryside. One of the earliest documents in the collection is a copy of an "Oration" by J. H. Fitten, a Phi Delta and member of the senior class, delivered before the newly organized Thalian and Phi Delta Societies on the Fourth of July, 1839. Another, a program of Commencement Exercises for November 13, 1850 provides a listing of the events which included no fewer than eight orations interspersed with musical interludes.

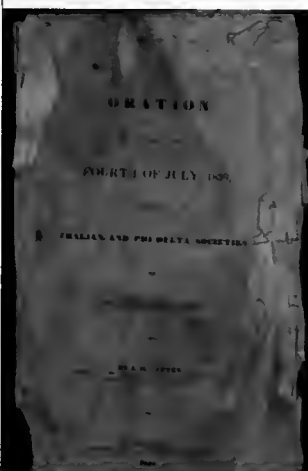

Reflecting a popular custom, the pages of an autograph album display pledges of friendship composed during 1856. They bear the signatures of seven of the ten members of the graduating class that year.

These and the other items in the collection are preserved in the archives as part of the university's heritage. They provide a unique perspective on the long history of Oglethorpe and of higher education in the South.
